RAILWAY MATTERS. A Wife-Tortured Benedick-Queer Suit for Mrs. Rush, the wife of a tailor at Brighton, England, lately petitioned for a divorce on the ground of cruelty. The respondent denied that he had ever kicked his wife, but one day when she had been a long little up stairs neglecting her domestic duties, he went up to her and said "fane, you had better walk down stairs, or you may, perhaps, be kicked down." She went down stairs more quickly than usual; and when she reached the bottom respondent tild slightly slap her face. Did once take up a carving-knife and say he would be recompensed, but he only said that in a jocular manner, intending merely to frighten her. Objected to her constantly walking out with her sen-in-law—not that there was any harm in it, but when a woman was married to a husband, was she bound to honor and obey him, or was alse to please herself? Did that because he did not regard the petitioner as an upright and prudent woman. Had every reason to believe that she was a curse, and not a blessing to man. The torment he had received from her would passibelief. She had been nothing but a treacherous hypocrite, who had thought to everthrow him and get him into her snare. By her anare he meant a trap. By a trap he meant a drag-net, By a drag-net he might mean a cage, and her object was to put a yoke of bondage round his neck—a yoke of iron which no man could bear. Had told her that he never cared for her. It was she who had sought him, not he her. Had been compelled to have the woman. Told her so the morning of the wedding, before her daughters, and reminded her that she had still time to draw back. Had once come up behind her as a he was walking in the street, and given her a poke on the shoulder with his stick. There was a groom riding past, and respondent told him that the woman was his wife. The London Examiner, of late date, observes:

As long as we have Lord Haddo, with his annual prudish notion against nude models, we shall never want a good illustration of Swife's definition of a nice man. The nastiness is entirely in the farticular view of the subject, not in the subject itself, which suggests nothing of the kind to the pure eyes of science or art. We hardly know a less enviable constitution of mind than one in which the contemplation of the most exquisite work of creation is indissolably connected with "outrages against decency and morrals." Some men can not conceive a Lucretia without a Tarquin, or meet Dorine on the stairs without a Tarquin, or meet Dorine on the stairs of the field himself. The poet certainly describes the goodness produced as a "stupid" one—"stupidly good"—and in that respect we must own that the study of the nude, after their own fashion, has been perfectly successful with Lord Haddo and Mr. Spooner. The kind of goodness is so dull as to see no difference between the studio of a Titian or a Raphael and a house of the worst fame.

Nothing can be more true than what Sir G. C. Lewis affirmed, that "The ancient masters, whose works all admired, and who were recognised as the classical models in every department of art, had acquired their knowledge by a study of the human figure, male and female." How else, indeed, could they have acquired til? lic may render the present practice of arti-impossible," for it is the same as forebodi the death of art itself. It is obvious that ever Lord Haddo converts the public to be views, the movement can not stop with put-ting down the nude in flesh and blood. It must, in consistency, be put down also in stone and on canvas; the monuments of art stone and on canvas; the monuments of art must perish with its original sources; and the same inexorable prudery will, of course, show the surgeon's dissecting-room as little mercy as the artist's studio, so that the humanest of all the sciences and professions will share the fate of the most beautiful of the arts. We dwell on this prospect with a sort of satisfac-tion, because there is some protection against bad principles in the very lengths to which they ought to be pushed, if they were found.

Distinguished Musician and Actress Appearance of Lubeck and Ristori. Stella, a fine and clever Paris correspond ent of the Home Journal, speaks of two dis-to birds singing and fountains playing in paradise.

As we were about leaving, a lady giided in and seated herself on the sofa cis-a-vis. A few turned their eyes on her for a moment, and then went on with their conversation. One or two, who seemed to know her, hovered around her as if charmed. She leaned gracefully on her right arm, which rested easily on the end of the sofa. The attitude was artistic, the pose classic. She wore a rich dark silk, demi-decolletee; the hair was black, and worn platnly on the temples; the brow was broad, the eyes large and black; the complexion brunette, and the features tinguished persons she met at a party:

Lubeck is about 30 in appearance, five feet nine inches in height, broad-chested and broad-browed. His hair is brown and luxuriant; his eyes dark and softly expressive as a woman's; his teeth fine; his voice soft and magical in its tones as the muse that flows from under his divine touch. With a manner a little nonchalant, Lubeck is tout a fait, the style to win the hearts of fair ladies. He played one or two of his own compositions; and such playing, such expression, such exquisite sentiment, such harmony! It took away the breath, and left us poweriess as a child. We were entranced, rapt in a dream from which we did not wish to wake. We saw a world such as we had heard the preachers describe—cities with golden domes, and diamond pavements, and millions of angelic forms filtring before us. We were listening to hirds singing and fountains playing in paradise. Unnappy Result of an Elogument.—The Richmond correspondent of the Petersburg Express mentions a case as having recently transpired in that city, which furnishes a melancholy comment upon the injudicious if not absolute folly of early or romantic matches. It states that a young and handsome girl of seventeen summers, very respectably connected in Baltimore, where her mother resides, had been compelled to seek the protection of her neighbors from the brutal and habitual ill-treatment of her husband, Edward N. Bryant, with whom she and, Edward N. Bryant, with whom she oped a short time ago from a boarding-theol near Baltimore. Her refusal finally to surrender to him a

Her refusal finally to surrender to him a small sum of money which her mother had sent her to purchase some necessaries with, led to a violent assault upon her, and the arrest of the unloving and unmanly husband, upon a charge of ill-freating the tender one, to whose protection be should have consecrated his life, as he had done his lip-rowa. The unhappy young wife left for her home in Baltimore, on Sunday night, a wiser if a sadder woman, than when a few months ago she hopefully and happily left the protecting influence of home and friends, to intrust her destiny to the guidance of a holiday's acquaintance.

The Cattle Disease in Poland.—Gurowski, writing to the New York Tribune on the cattle disease, says: "The disease of pulmonary murrain is known in Poland, and I once experienced it terribiy on my estates. It is highly contagious, and it is a practice with the Polish rural population not to shed the blood in killing the cattle, but to finish them with a blow, and bury very deep, with skin and all. When it is possible, the sound cattle are kept in forests, to avoid any communication between villages. Often manure and wood are burnt sround the encamped cattle. The general belief is, that the disease can spring up (so to say) from the sell on marshy pasturages, but as often it is introduced with droves from the steppes of the Ukraine. Cooling drinks—solution of acids (sulphuric) with water—are used for the sick as well as for the healthy, and various other means. I speak of thirty-five years ago." brow was broad, the eyes large and black; the complexion brunette, and the features rather more in the Roman than in the Italian type. We could not take our eyes from this picture so exquisite in form and color—an inexplicable charm was around her. A soft soul-light lay on the features as sunbeams lie on the brown leaves in an autumn day. A soft voice said to us in a low key, "Madame Ristori." "Madame Ristori."

SUIT AGAINST AN ORNIBUS DRIVER FOR OVERLOADING.—A Liverpool omnibus, licensed to carry sixteen passengers, recently took in seventeen or eighteen, a very moderate thing for an omnibus to do, as a New Yorker would think. On this Liverpool morning a druggist was crowded and thereby made cross, as was natural though injudicious. He accordingly entered a complaint at the Police Court, charging the driver with a violation of the ordinance regulating the number of passengers. The lawyer who conducted the defense said this was one of the most contemptible proceedings he had ever known; but as it did not appear that the learned counsel knew anything about the peculiar feelings of men riding in an omnibus, his remark went for nothing, and the driver was fined twenty-five shillings and the costs.

GEOGRAPHY OF THE KINGDOM OF NAPLES. The Kingdom of the Two Sicilies, now properly called the Kingdom of Naples, has an area nearly the size of the State of New York, area nearly the size of the State of New York, and a population of about 9,000,000. The Continental portion contains about 31,000 square miles, and the island of Sicily has an area of 10,508 square miles. The island is the finest and most important in the Mediterranean, and it is larger in extent than Massachusetts and Rhode Island combined, and the population is about equal in numbers to that of the six New England States. The city of Palermo is about the same rank in The Isitiatoray Trot is America.—On Friday, September 6, 1816, a horse called "Old Blue" trotted three miles on the Salem Turnpike, at Lynn, in eight minutes and forty-two seconds. This was the first trot in America. On the 10th of the same month, the same horse trotted the distance in eight minutes and fifty-six. seconds; and again on the 12th in eight minutes and eighteen and three-fourth seconds. The horse was owned by Major Stackpole. The last trial was timed by B. W. Crowningshield, Esq., Capt. George Talcott, of the United States Ordinance, Mr. Eckley, of Boston, and Mr. Bott, of Salem, being the judges.

A CHILD BLOWN INTO A TRUE,—At Farmington, Iowa, recently, a little girl four years old was carried by a sudden gust of wind and lodged in a cherry tree a few rods distance, her clothes having caught in the branches of the tree, where she remained unburt. The anxious father ran to and fro seeking her, when the little innocent, dripping with rain, peeped down through the branches of the cherry tree, exclaiming, "I'm here, pal"

PERILOUS EXPENIENCE OF RARRY, THE HORSE-TAMER,—Mr. Rarry was recently operating upon a two-year old filly at Oxford, when suddenly, from some unexplainable cause, the animal dashed away among the spectators, dragging Mr. Rarry with him. Three front rows of assats were broken, and upward of thirty occupants were unseated. Most of them were more frightened than hurt. One lady was obliged to be taken home in a fly, and three young men were also rather injured. Mr. Rarry showed the most determined registance to the animal, and by his courage and strength succeeded in restraining it from doing further mischief, and with the aid of his two assistants, the colt was secured. HYENA-LINE HUMANITY.—The Cleveland Plain Dealer mays the water of the Lake has washed away the earth from some of the graves of the unfortunate passengers of the steamer Griffith, and on last Sunday some human byenas were there breaking open the boxes and scattering the remains around on the beach in search of valuables that might be around the bodies.

DETERMINED ON PAPAL CANNOSS.—It appears, says the Progress of Lyons, that the Duke de Larochefoucault persists in his intention to present a number of cannon to the Pope, as he has ordered five of different caliber to be made at Liege with all their accessories. Paiyays Wan Berwans Horse. Karras.—A little private war is raging between two hotel keepers on the Canada side of Niagara Falla, and visitors are subjected to much vexation in consequence. The rivary seems to have taken somewhat of a national turn. The Drummoudville Reporter, taking the British side, blames the Canadian Government for granting exclusive privilege to Americans, and says: "If a favor is asked by an American, it is granted!" If he requires Miles Run av Raiswat Cass.—The whole number of miles ran on the Histois Central Railroad, during the month of April, was 178,846, at an average cost per mile of 21-17 cents. This includes all the expenditures, superintending, wages of engineers and firemen, oil, waste, &c.

Queen Race in Vincinia.—A foot race, for a bettle of grape juice, came off last Saturday afternoon, between an ex-sheriff of Hentico, and an M. D. of the same county. The doctor won without an effort, to the surprise of the friends of the ex-officer.

Garibaldi had been joined by some of his officers, and particularly by Colonel Medici, with considerable reinforcements. He was monacing Montalo, the surrender of which would lead to the fall of Palermo.

It was expected that Palermo would soon surrender. A proclamation by the Committee of Palermo has been posted up in all parts of that town, announcing the victorious march of Garibaldi, and that Sicily would soon become independent. It also adds, "Even the Neapolitan police are commencing to desert their majeters," and terminates with, "Vica El re Emmanuet; vica Garibaldi."

Distressing Condition of the Matrimonia

Market in England.

A London correspondent of the Philadelphia Inquirer represents a distressing state of things as existing in the "female matrimonial market" of London. The blessed angels who float in the artificial atmosphere of a London season have become a perfect drug in the market. It is not that there are so many more women than men there, but the dear creatures are so terrifically extrawagant, inconcivably lasy, that the there, but the dear creatures are so terrifically extravagant, inconceivably lazy, that the masculine gender avoid them as they would a pestilence. These are not the characteristics of the higher classes; for such women as the Duchess of Portland and Lady Palmerston exercise energy, system, and economy in their household affairs, the "high life below stairs" proceeds upon a different principle to conceal its native vulgarity, and is perfectly reckless of expense. The consequence is that young men, on limited incomes, in such a city as London, who do not contemplate carly bankruptcy. who do not contemplate early bankruptcy, decline forming matrimonial connections of such a character. They keep single, and this singleness, voluntary on one side and compalsory on the other, is the chief cause of the most gigantic and growing of social evils.

A negro named Lewis Clarke, who has been for several years connected with the Windsor Postoffice, in different capacities, was yesterday caught in the act of purioining letters from the office. Some months since he resigned his position in the office, and set up on his own account as moneylender and speculator in general. He bought land, speculated in town lots, built houses, traded in bonds and mortgages, and put on airs enough for a prince, which was the more noticeable from the fact that he had no other visible means of support.

There is scarcely a doubt that Clarke has been carrying on his plundering operation at that office ever since his first connection with it, which readily accounts for his rapid acquisition of property, as well as for the many losses that have been sustained in the transmission of money between this and other Western States and Canada by the mails, all of which are overhauled and distributed at the Windsor office. His depredations must amount to thousands of dollars. A full examination may disclose facts that will serve to estimate the extent,—Detroit Free Press.

Singular Scene in an English Court.—A

SINGULAR SCRIE IN AN ENGLISH COURT-A BIGAMES'S WIFE OFFERS CONSOLATION TO HIS OTHER SPOUR.—A base deceiver, Macmillan by name, was recently tried at the Inverness by name, was recently tried at the inverness Circuit Court for bigamy. His two wives were waiting in the witness-room—the one from Coldstream, a respectable and somewhat elderly looking woman, the other from Rossshire, a younger person. On its being reported in the witness-room that Macmillan had pleaded guilty, his Ross-shire spouse burst into tears; when the feeling Borderess, stepping forward and drawing the weeping one sattention by a gentle tap on the shoulder, said, "I'm saying, oman, are ye Donald's wife?" She was answered dolefully, "I believe I am." "Hoo many bairns has ye tae him, my good 'oman?" "I have had two, and one of them is dead." "Hoot awa, puir body! I'm very sorry for ye; see, there's a sixpence use ye, and I wish ye luck o' bim; for gin he kick ye as aft as he has done me, I fear ye'll be tired enough o' him." The disconsolate wife adroitly closed her hand on the proffered coin, seeming to accept it as no small solace in the circumstances.

EXTRAORDINARY PRESENTIMENT—A HUBBAND DESTROYS HIMSELF ON ACCOUNT OF A DREAK.—A Mrs. Fenwick and four children left Melbourne for England in the Reyal Charter, and all were lost, Mr. Fenwick, the husband and father, remained in Melbourne, and about five days before the wreck wrote to a friend in Hobart Town, saying he had seen his wife and children, in a dream, battling with the waves and calling to him for help. The dream so preyed on his mind that he committed suicule by cutting his throat, and that on the very night of the wreck.
